

Oxford Health
NHS Foundation Trust

FREE WORKSHOP FOR GPs:

Optimising the Use of Antipsychotic Medication and Non-pharmacological Treatment for People with Dementia

Why you should attend:

- The appropriate use of antipsychotics in people with dementia continues to be a national and clinical priority.
- To hear about, and discuss, the most recent research regarding the efficacy of anti-psychotic medication and the use of non-pharmacological treatments for behavioural and psychological symptoms in dementia.

What you will learn:

- Information on the best research evidence and a wealth of experience of clinical management.
- Outcomes from the WHELD study, a multi-centre National Institute for Health Research Programme, focusing on improving well-being and health for people with dementia in care homes.

The RCGP Accredited workshops bring together local GPs, who are engaged in dementia care and working in care homes, to discuss anti-psychotic medication and non-pharmacological treatments, in an interactive and engaging meeting.

Dates and Venues:

Thursday 26th November – Belmont Room, Betty's Tea Rooms, York

Wednesday 6th January – Reed Hall, University of Exeter, Exeter

Friday 8th January – Littlebury Hotel, Kings End, Bicester

Tuesday 12th January – Manchester Art Gallery, Manchester

Thursday 14th January – Wolfson CARD, KCL, London

All workshops scheduled for 12.30 – 17.00.

For further information please email: erin.poyner@oxfordhealth.nhs.uk

Accredited by the Royal College of General Practitioners
Funded by the National Institute of Health Research
Endorsed by NHS England